

Animal Fact Sheet

Name: _____ Date: _____

Red-headed Krait

Bungarus flaviceps

The Red-headed Krait is a highly venomous snake known for its striking appearance, featuring a vibrant red head and tail contrasted with a glossy bluish-black body. Native to Southeast Asia, it is a ...

Quick facts

Classification: Reptile

Family: Elapidae

Habitat: Tropical and subtropical forests, especially lowland rainforests near water sources

Diet: Carnivore

Conservation status: Least Concern

Lifespan: 10-15 years

Weight: 0.3-1.2 kg

Scientific name: Bungarus flaviceps

Did you know?

- Despite its highly potent neurotoxic venom, the Red-headed Krait is so elusive that very few bites have been recorded in the wild.
- The Red-headed Krait's bright coloration serves as a warning to potential predators of its toxicity. Unlike many kraits, it is mostly active at night...

What I learned
